

ORIGIN FILE 000

Before the binders. Before the control families. Before anyone called me an analyst.

I spent ten years in rooms where the stakes were a body under load and a clock on the wall. You learn fast that "looks fine" is not evidence. A form held wrong fails quietly. Until it does not.

That instinct did not retire. It changed uniforms.

Now the rooms are smaller, the lights are colder, and the load is a control owner with eighteen open tickets and a deadline. The work is the same. Watch the form. Find the quiet failure. Write it down before someone gets hurt.

I am Luna Risk. Senior GRC analyst, Arclight Mission Systems. Steward of TRACER.

Silk Standards. Steel Evidence.

The Arclight Files start this week.
